DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This farmstead is located at the end of a long lane part of which is known as Capatan Drive. It extends in a southwesterly direction from U.S. Route 40 southeast of Hagerstown in Washington County. The buildings are located on the east side of Landis Run on sloping ground. The house faces north and the barn south.

The house is a two story, six bay limestone structure which appears to have been built in two parts. Its two western bays which seem to be an addition have a recessed double porch along their front elevation. Large block like stones are arranged above the openings of the eastern section of the house and evidence of a vertical seam remains between the two sections at the south and rear elevation. Windows in the more easterly section are noticeably smaller than the west part's windows.

Windows in the east section have moderately wide frames with joints secured with wooden pegs. Late 19th century two over two pane sashes have been installed. Windows in the west section retain six over six pane sashes. The main entrance is located in the third bay from the east end of the front elevation. Above it is a three light transom. Another entrance is located approximately opposite this in the rear elevation. The west addition has doors at the first and second story levels of its front elevation and one door in the south wall. Each of these entrances has a transom. A modern gable roofed porch shelters the front door.

Asphalt shingles cover the roof which extends beyond the end walls. Brick chimneys are located inside the gables and at the point where the two sections join. Just behind the house is a stone out kitchen. North of the house is a large stone end bank barn with a frame forebay. In the barn was found the following inscription: S* C* BOHER July, first 1854.

The buildings appear to be in excellent condition.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This complex illustrates the importance of the native limestone as a building material in Washington County. Present is a stone house built in two parts, a stone out kitchen and a stone bank barn. The older part of the house appears to date from the early 19th century and follows the four bay, off-center front door plan, popular in this area. A two bay addition extended the length of the house. The newer part, probably dating from the mid century, has a recessed double porch along its front elevation and brought the total appearance of the house to a very stylish regional form of the period.
